CSWR Research Fellowship Application

CSWR Research Fellowships are available each year for two student residents who wish to enhance their academic study through research that makes a distinguished contribution to the mission of the Center in accordance with its current themes:

- Race, Religion, and Nationalism
- Matter and Spirit: Ecology and the Non-Human Turn
- Poetry, Philosophy, and Religion
- Time and Technology
- The Future of (the Study of) Religion

Research Fellows will work closely with the Director to design and implement programming related to these themes, including but not limited to lectures, conferences, reading groups, workshops, etc. These fellowships include a taxable stipend of $4000 to each Research Fellow, disbursed in two payments in October and March.

Research Fellowship applications should include an academic autobiography, an explanation of how one's own research interests align with one or more themes of the Center, and ideas for designing and implementing academic programming in line with those themes. Each applicant will also be interviewed by the Director.

Guidelines and Suggestions

Applicants are welcome to consult with the Associate Director in preparing their application.

Applications should not exceed 1000 words.

The application should be attached to the regular application for residence at the Center.

Please note that award of a Research Fellowship is contingent upon being awarded residence at the Center.
